'They turned against her'

Rehtaeh Parsons. Mom mourns bullying victim, 17, who killed herself after alleged rape and more than a year of abuse

HALEY RYAN
haley.ryan@metronews.ca

Sitting on the couch in her living room, Leah Parsons gathered a blanket around her legs and looked around at the photos of her daughter lining the walls.

"Rehtaeh's everywhere here," Parsons said with a sad smile.

Rehtaeh Parsons, 17, died in hospital Sunday, several days after hanging herself. She had endured a year and a half of bullying and victimization, stemming from a night in 2011 when her mother believes she was raped by four boys.

Quoted

"How cruel is the world to do that?"

Leah Parsons

"She was a very busy, headstrong girl," Parsons said in the Cole Harbour home she shares with her partner, Jason, and where Rehtaeh grew up.

In her younger years, Rehtaeh was a straight-A student who couldn't get enough of books and learning and wanted to be a marine activist, Parsons says.

On that November night in 2011, Parsons says, Rehtaeh had been at a friend's house when an assault allegedly occurred. She says her daughter remembered being led upstairs by one of the boys, but not much else after that, until she heard the click of a photo being taken.

Parsons claims that one of the boys texted the photo a few days later, and when Rehtaeh walked into Cole Harbour District High School she was called a slut.

"She never could go back to that school again," Parsons said. "They turned against her."

Parsons says for months Rehtaeh couldn't go anywhere without people calling her names or texting horrible things because they believed the story her accused attackers had spread around the school.

They reported the alleged sexual assault to police, but charges were never laid and the investigation took about a year to complete, which Parsons says was very frustrating.

"It could have been handled a lot differently," Parsons said.

She says she is speaking out now because it's important that people realize how much bullying hurts, and to just share Rehtaeh's side of the story.

"Don't jump on the victim, help the victim."

Pregnancy-discrimination hearing pinpoints meeting

Testimony backs up
accused's claim

A witness in a discrimination case based on pregnancy says he tried to facilitate a meeting between his boss and a former employee in March 2011.

Jacob MacIsaac, a former supervisor at the Community Justice Society, testified before the province's Human Rights Commission on Tuesday that he was present for a meeting between Yvonne Atwell, the executive director, and Tammy Quilty-MacAskill, a restorative justice caseworker.

because she was pregnant. Atwell claims performance issues, including a two-day suspension and two-day probation period, led to an extension not being granted.

During the meeting, MacIsaac testified that Atwell told Quilty-MacAskill she would not get the job because "she wouldn't be there," to which Quilty-MacAskill replied, "Because I'm going on (maternity) leave."

MacIsaac said Quilty-MacAskill then asked if she could still apply for the job. Atwell replied, "You're allowed to apply, but you won't get it."

MacIsaac also testified that he told Quilty-MacAskill to keep her pregnancy to herself in December 2010. Two months later, Quilty-MacAskill told her coworkers during a staff meeting.

"It was a very happy time during that meeting," said MacIsaac. "I just looked at my feet."

During the cross-examination, Brad Proctor, lawyer for the defence, noted MacIsaac's exit interview from the Community Justice Society did not mention any discrimination he witnessed on behalf of Atwell.

"It's one thing to say it, it's another thing to follow through," said MacIsaac.

MacIsaac resigned from the Community Justice Society in March 2011, a few weeks before Quilty-MacAskill's second contract ended on April 6. He said he did not know whether the meeting between himself, Atwell and Quilty-MacAskill led to discrimination.

Man swipes fake toonies for cash at businesses: Police

Police are asking for the public's help after they say a man exchanged fake rolls of $2 coins for cash, costing businesses thousands of dollars.

Between Feb. 25 and March 25, police say the suspect went into three businesses and handed over several rolls of toonies in exchange for cash.

Eventually an employee discovered the front and back of the rolls were $2 coins, while the rest were metal washers of the same weight and size as a toonie. Police say the losses to the businesses are in the thousands.

According to the surveillance tape from two businesses, the suspect is a black man with a light complexion in his 20s with facial hair on his upper lip and chin.

Anyone with information on the crimes or the suspect is asked to call 409-5016 or Crime Stoppers. METRO

Man initially arrested last month. More charges in pre-paid card scam

A 19-year-old Halifax man is facing 53 new fraud-related charges in connection with a pre-paid credit-card scam.

Halifax Regional Police say Curtis Jay Fountain was initially arrested on March 24 after weeks of investigating an increase in pre-paid credit-card scam complaints.

He was released from custody pending a court hearing and was arrested again Monday when police found him to be allegedly tied to 10 additional fraud-related investigations.

He was to appear in court on Tuesday, facing a total of 56 charges. METRO

Mom questions investigation in daughter's 2011 rape case

Bullied teenager.

Yearlong police efforts yielded no charges; Rehtaeh hanged herself Thursday

haley.ryan@metronews.ca

Leah Parsons says she isn't an "evil, vindictive person" and doesn't wish any harm on the four boys who she alleges raped her daughter over a year ago, but she wishes the case had been handled differently and that charges had been laid.

Parsons, whose 17-year-old daughter Rehtaeh killed herself last week, said the police investigation that began November 2011 has been "totally" frustrating.

"They had to interview people and I understand that, but I'm like, 'OK, it's 10 months later and you're telling me you still have not interviewed those boys?'" Parsons said in her Cole Harbour home Tuesday afternoon.

Parsons said she found out about the alleged rape on the day when one of the boys sent out a photo depicting what appeared to be a sex act and called Rehtaeh a "slut" around school.

Parsons said some people insulted Rehtaeh in person, but most used the phone or harassed her on social media.

"Her best friend said, 'Yeah, you should leave the school 'cause sluts don't belong here.' That was on her Facebook status."

Parsons said that, though

Leah Parsons recounts her daughter Rehtaeh's story of bullying at her Cole Harbour home on Tuesday. JEFF HARPER/METRO

Quoted

"I don't know what kind of (bullying) campaigns they're doing, but it's not working."

Leah Parsons

she noticed her daughter going through mood swings last week, Rehtaeh had liked her new therapist, her circle of friends was growing and a teacher was helping her make goals for school.

But last Thursday, Parsons found her in their bathroom after Rehtaeh had hung her self.

"I just thought she was going to start breathing," Parsons said, looking down at her hands.

Rehtaeh was taken to hospital. Parsons said the doctors had machines "breathing for her" until her daughter's brain died on Sunday.

Parsons, who started a Facebook page for Rehtaeh on Monday, said writing a post about her daughter's life, which has been shared hundreds of times, helped her process everything.

"I was doing it for me at first," Parsons said. "Then I thought, like, you know, people need to know, and Rehtaeh would want them to know that this is what's happening."

Evidence lacking

No grounds to charge suspects, RCMP say

RCMP spokesman Cpl. Scott MacRae says while he understands the public will be asking a lot of questions following the death of Rehtaeh Parsons, sometimes there is just not enough evidence to lay charges.

MacRae confirmed there was an incident in November 2011, but after a year's investigation into the alleged sexual assault it was determined there was insufficient evidence to go forward.

"We understand that the public is looking for why certain actions are taken before the courts or not, and it's very complex," MacRae said. "The police have to look at each case on its own merit."

MacRae says there are privacy laws protecting the details of the investigation because young people are involved, but the photo sent poses a challenge because of the vastness of social media.

"Without getting into specifics of police process and details ... it's pretty hard to explain fully on why (one child-porn case) went to charge and other investigations don't."

Rehtaeh review back on table: Landry

Justice Minister Ross Landry said late Tuesday night that he has asked senior government officials to present options on how best to proceed in reviewing the Rehtaeh Parsons case.

The announcement at 10 p.m. was a stark change from earlier Tuesday, when Landry said he didn't plan to order a review of an RCMP investigation that concluded there were no grounds to lay charges against four boys over allegations they had sexually assaulted Rehtaeh when she was 15.

Following that alleged incident, the 17-year-old Cole Harbour teen was bullied relentlessly — and took her own life a few days ago.

"This situation is tragic. I am deeply saddened — as I think are all Nova Scotians — by the death of this young woman," Landry said in a statement Tuesday night.

"As a parent, I can't imagine the pain this family is going through at this time. My thoughts are with them."

Landry also said he wants to meet with Leah Parsons, Rehtaeh's mother, to discuss her experience with the justice system.

Parsons told Metro on Tuesday she was frustrated with how the RCMP handled her daughter's claim that she was raped in November 2011.

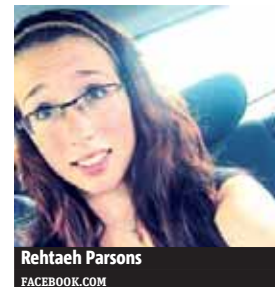

"I know that law enforcement and the public prosecution service do their best, every day, to administer and enforce the law," Landry said.

"It's important that Nova Scotians have faith in the justice system, and I am committed to exploring the mechanisms that exist to review the actions of all relevant authorities to ensure the system is always working to the best of its ability, in pursuit of justice."

Landry said more details are expected in the coming days.

'Ditch' fee. Halifax Water GM provides clarity on proposed price hike

The general manager of the Halifax Regional Water Commission made an unscheduled appearance at Halifax regional council Tuesday to explain a "new" proposed fee.

Councillors asked Carl Yates to appear to clarify the so-called "ditch" fee, which covers the maintenance of ditches that form part of HRM's stormwater conveyance.

Yates said the fee applies only to residents in the urban core — some of whom are already paying it.

"In many cases, this charge is not a significant increase, because the previous charge was already embedded with the wastewater charge," he said. "So it's a different way of charging that makes more sense."

Yates said residents who are paying the "embedded" fee will see it as a separate line on their water bill, if approved by the Utility and Review Board.

Coun. Stephen Adams clarified HRM residents outside the urban core — those who are serviced by the provincial Department of Transportation and Infrastructure Renewal — will not pay the new fee.

Residents in the urban core who have a ditch but do not currently pay for city water will get a bill from Halifax Water if the UARB approves the fee.

"In essence, they're getting the service for free," Yates told Coun. Brad Johns. "They're not being charged on their tax bill, they're not being charged by Halifax Water, but ... they will be charged for that service that they receive."

The charge to those customers will be about $55 a year.

Council learns lesson on surplus properties

New policy. HRM approves clear rules, categories in hopes of avoiding future battles

ruth.davenport@metronews.ca

Halifax regional councillors have approved a new policy governing the disposal of surplus properties that builds on some of the lessons learned from the St. Patrick's-Alexandra debacle.

The sale of the north-end elementary school to a private developer was voided in court after three not-for-profit groups successfully argued the municipality didn't follow its own rules in putting the school up for sale.

Council approved a new administrative order on Tuesday that sets out five categories for defining surplus properties, and enshrines specific processes for disposing of the property under each category.

"It provides a lot of clarity around how we can proceed," said Coun. Jennifer Watts. "I think the categories ... are based on experiences we've had in the past and ... will be very helpful."

Watts tabled four amendments to the order, geared towards transparency, community engagement and accommodation of non-profit groups.

Quoted

Coun. Russell Walker

The most contentious guarantees a window of up to 120 days for non-profit groups to submit a written proposal for a property.

Some councillors suggested that's too long for a property to sit empty, but others pointed out it's insignificant given the disposal process can take years.

Coun. Reg Rankin added that non-profit groups have been clear in their feedback on the issue.

"If you recall with St. Pat's-Alexandra, one of the complaints was that 90 days was not sufficient time," he said. "We're not talking about one non-profit group, it might be a coalition of groups, and they don't have great resources."

The other amendments ensure councillors are notified of surplus inventories in their districts; require the city's grants committee to develop publicly available criteria for scoring "community interest" projects; and allow for partnership models between private developers and non-profit groups.

Condominium assessments to be examined

City staffers will take a closer look at the assessments for condominiums compared to apartment buildings, though some councillors were reluctant to OK the exercise.

Coun. Bill Karsten asked for a staff report to analyze the difference in assessments, noting the issue came up during the last election. The motion came under attack on several different fronts, allegedly for being a back-door, piecemeal approach to tax reform and for making a flawed comparison.

Coun. Gloria McCluskey pointed out that condos and apartments are valued using different methods and receive different municipal services.

Coun. Jennifer Watts argued that taxation issues shouldn't be considered in isolation.

"If we begin to try to pick off one thing at a time without understanding the full context, I'm not sure that's a helpful way to go," she said.

RUTH DAVENPORT/METRO

Inaction

Coun. Bill Karsten pointed out the motion asks for a staff report only, and doesn't bind council to any action.

$5.3M a year. N.S. to fund insulin pumps, supplies

About 1,000 or more youths under the age of 19 in Nova Scotia will be eligible for government funding to help cover the cost of insulin pumps and supplies.

Premier Darrell Dexter touted the $5.3-million-a-year program Tuesday as part of a series of post-budget, election-style announcements.

Dexter spoke at a gathering of volunteers and families affected by diabetes at a Halifax community centre gymnasium. He told the group that extending funding for a pump program was a direct result of being able to balance the province's books.

"This is one of those opportunities, to supply insulin pumps that have been an outstanding need in this province for so many years," Dexter said.

The program would also cover related supplies for young adults from 19 to 25 with Type 1 diabetes who use insulin pumps and are no longer covered by their parents' insurance.

Dexter said the program would be based on need and children with insurance would still have to apply for coverage with their providers before seeking government help.

He said program details were still being worked on in regards to whether there would be any restrictions on coverage or on the types of pumps to be funded.

Dexter said the province expected to begin taking applications by July 31.

Insulin pumps monitor and regulate insulin levels while delivering the drug at a steady rate to suit a patient's need.

Mount ready to welcome new building on campus

Honouring women.
Margaret Norrie McCain Centre slated to open December 2014

There hasn't been a new classroom building on the Mount Saint Vincent University campus in 40 years — but that's about to change.

The university has reached its fundraising goal of $12 million, and that money is going toward a new building: the Margaret Norrie McCain Centre for Teaching, Learning, and Research.

"It's very needed," said Sarah Veinot, chair of the university's board of governors.

"We've had some programs in temporary locations for a number of years, so this new building is critical for our students' experience here at Mount Saint Vincent University for providing academic excellence."

A crowd of roughly 200 people stood on a steep road alongside the new building's construction site Tuesday to celebrate the news and to officially kick off construction.

Veinot and Lynn Coveyduck, chair of one of the fundraising committees, announced to the group that Project Twenty12 — a campaign to raise $12 million in 20 months — was successful. The building will be named after McCain for her donation of $2.25 million.

The university says it will be the only building at a Canadian university dedicated inside and out to honouring women.

"The challenge of raising the money was offset by the beauty of being able to raise the funds to build a badly needed building and one that would do honour to women through-

- ✓ Ensure you're recycling properly by following HRM's sorting guides for 'What Goes Where' and 'How to Prepare It.'
- ✓ Ensure you know your collection day and week—your April 2013 schedule is below.
- ✓ Materials must be curbside by 7:00 am to ensure collection.
- ✓ Place garbage in a secure garbage bag or container—scattered garbage is the householder's responsibility.
- ✓ Observe limits: up to 6 bags/containers of garbage and 1 bulky item per residential house; up to 5 bags/containers of garbage per unit (in buildings with 2-6 units) and 2 bulky items per building.

If you live in an apartment building that does not have a recycling program in place, talk to your superintendent—it's required by law.

Suspect fantasized about stabbing people: Police

Texas violence.

At least 14 injured as man stalked from building to building

A 20-year-old student went on a mass stabbing assault at a Texas community college Tuesday, wounding at least 14 people — many in the face and neck — before being subdued and arrested, authorities said Tuesday.

The Harris County Sheriff's Office said in a statement that Dylan Quick had been planning the attack at the Lone Star College System's campus in Cypress for some time and had fantasies of stabbing people to death since he was in elementary school.

Quick, who was charged with three counts of aggravated assault, used a razor-type knife, and pieces of the blade were found in at least one victim, the sheriff's office said. The handle was discovered in a backpack that Quick was carrying when he was arrested.

The attack at about 11:20 a.m. sent at least 12 people to hospital, while several others refused treatment at the scene, according to Cy-Fair Volunteer Fire Department spokesman Robert Rasa.

Two people remained in critical condition Tuesday evening at Memorial Hermann-Texas Medical Center, spokeswoman Alex Rodriguez said.

"He came running and swinging at my neck as I tried to get out of the way."

Student Michelle Alvarez, to the Houston Chronicle.

Diante Cotton, 20, said he was sitting in a cafeteria with some friends when a girl clutching her neck walked in, yelling, "He's stabbing people! He's stabbing people!"

Harris County Sheriff Adrian Garcia said there were indications when calls came in to the department that "students or faculty were actively responding to work to subdue this individual."

"So we're proud of those folks but we're glad no one else is injured any more severely than they are," Garcia said.

Student Michael Chalfan said a stun gun was used to subdue the man. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Serbia. Gunman kills 13 in their beds, at doorsteps

Serbia awash in guns

The wars from 1991 to 1999 as Yugoslavia broke up left much of the region traumatized and heavily armed.

- Weapons owned by civilians have caused fatalities every week, as traumatized former soldiers shoot family or commit suicide or kids find guns at home.

- Serbia has about three million weapons owned by civilians, according to the Small Arms Survey, a Swiss NGO. It says Serbia has the fifth-highest number of weapons per capita in the world, with some 38 guns for every 100 people.

He went from house to house in the village at dawn, gunning down his mother, his son, a two-year-old cousin and 10 other neighbours. Residents said if a police patrol car hadn't shown up, they all would have been dead.

Police said they had no motive yet for the carnage that left six men, six women and a child dead Tuesday in Velika Ivanca, a Serbian village 50 kilometres southeast of Belgrade.

"Most of the victims were shot while they were asleep," Serbian police chief Milorad Veljovic told reporters.

After the rampage, police said suspect Ljubisa Bogdanovic, a 60-year-old who fought in one of the bloodiest sieges of the Balkan wars, turned his gun on himself and his wife as authorities closed in. Both were in grave condition at hospital.

"He knocked on the doors, and as they were opened he just fired a shot," said villager Radovan Radosavljevic. "He was a good neighbour, and anyone would open their doors to him."

The suspect's older brother Radmilo broke down in tears, unable to explain why the massacre had happened.

"As a child, he was a frightened little boy," he said. "I used to defend him from other children. He couldn't even slaughter a chicken."

But he said his brother changed after serving in the army during a brutal Serb-led offensive against the Croatian town of Vukovar in 1992 — the worst bloodshed of Croatia's 1991-95 war for independence.

Brown resigned after a brief stint over tweets containing gay and racist slurs.

Britain's Margaret Thatcher — divisive even in death

Graffiti adorns a wall in west Belfast, Northern Ireland, on Tuesday. While some Britons mourned the death of former prime minister Margaret Thatcher, others raised glasses of champagne at impromptu street parties. And the song Ding Dong! The Witch is Dead from The Wizard of Oz is surging up the U.K. singles charts. Thatcher was an unusually divisive figure blamed by many for crippling Britain's labour unions and sabotaging workers' rights. South Africans also passionately debated whether Thatcher helped or hindered the cruel system of white rule. Many leaders, however, were quick to share their praise and admiration for Thatcher — Stephen Harper will attend her funeral, scheduled for April 17 in London, as will Queen Elizabeth. PETER MORRISON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Court reduces sentences of torturers

Appeal. Disabled victim was found with facial fractures, disfiguring injuries and a gaping head wound

Ontario's top court has lowered the sentences of a Hamilton couple who held a developmentally disabled man captive and tortured him while draining his bank account to buy drugs and video-game equipment.

Dakota Thompson and Stanley Brown were part of a group convicted of aggravated assault and forcible confinement for inflicting horrific injuries on a 23-year-old disabled man over more than two weeks in 2009.

Brown was originally sentenced to 13 years — nearly double the sentence the defence and Crown had jointly suggested — and Thompson was sentenced to 10 years, which was also far more than the Crown had recommended.

The Appeal Court sentenced Brown to serve seven years and two months and Thompson to six years and eight months. With credit for pre-trial custody and the time they have already served in prison, they would be eligible to apply for parole in about a year. THE CANADIAN PRESS

According to Crown lawyers, some photos were sent to prospective johns. Four girls were allegedly pimped out and forced into sex. Three were minors at the time.

TWEEZING OUT THE FAKERS

We are not alone.

We just haven't noticed yet.

That's one conclusion you could draw from the latest breathless alien disclosure.

The so-called "Atacama Humanoid" is so called because it was allegedly found in the Atacama Desert of Chile, and is only six inches tall. Talk about your "little" green man. Easy to overlook.

A full closeup is promised on April 22 when a "documentary" called Sirius premieres in Hollywood.

There's the first clue.

In the trailer, Atacama Humanoid is featured at his (her?) own autopsy, along with a lot of the usual stuff about how the presence of aliens and their cool technology on Earth has been suppressed by the oil industry, large corporations and financial interests, blah, blah. Why is it these guys always suppress cool technologies but somehow adopt loser technologies like electric cars,

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan

solar power and wind? (Elementary, my dear Watson. Precisely because they don't work.)

The trailer for Sirius is causing a fair amount of fringe-media fuss because of the autopsy scenes and an X-ray of Atacama Humanoid, which reveals an anatomically plausible skeleton. In the autopsy shot, it appears that someone is extracting Atacama's brain from the back of his tiny skull. Either that or it's a note that says, "Fooled you again, sucker."

The man behind these shenanigans, er, proceedings is Dr. Steven Greer, a former-emergency room medical doctor, who claims to have attracted the highest ever amount of crowd-sourced funds for a documentary (see "sucker" above). ER goes ET.

Dr. Greer is the self-declared world's leading authority on extraterrestrials, and has founded more centres and projects than you can shake a stick at. There's another clue: Real scientists don't need to create their own centres and projects. That's what universities are for.

Sadly, even though we're doomed to be disappointed — ah-gain — the Internet is abuzz with a desperate hope that this time, ET really has come to call. I mean, this guy Greer is a real doctor, so he says, and the former chairman of a real emergency department in North Carolina.

But this is hardly his first "disclosure." He's been disclosing the truth about aliens since at least 1993. Funny — until now nobody has paid any attention.

Maybe Dr. Greer is a victim of Short Alien Syndrome. It's hard to take seriously an alien autopsy performed with tweezers.

Remember, too, that this is not the first alien autopsy; that was the aptly titled 1995 faux broadcast Alien Autopsy: (Fact or Fiction?) It turned out to be the latter. At least that fake alien was bigger than a breadbox.

So, fellow ET buffs, be prepared to have your faith shattered, yet again. I fear we're the victims of an Earth-bound conspiracy: nasty, brutish ... and short.

CYRIL RUOSO
Wildlife photographer,

How did you manage to take this striking photograph?
I used a specific homemade floating perch for the camera to rest on, and a remote-control transmission linked to the camera in a water housing. It's not exactly the most standard of equipment but it worked. It seems a very tricky shot to take, with the frogs normally being averse to such frigid conditions.

What were the challenges?
They seemed to be fascinated with the shiny dome of the camera lens. Every time they came into contact with it, I had to clean the glass and wait all over again for the frogs to be in the right spot.

New movie. The latest Jackie Robinson movie looks at how one executive helped the famed ball player break colour barriers

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

Each year on April 15 Major League Baseball pays tribute to Jackie Robinson.

The second baseman is remembered not only as a veteran of six World Series, the recipient of the inaugural MLB Rookie of the Year Award in 1947 and an inductee into the Baseball Hall of Fame but especially as the first African American man to play in Major League Baseball in the modern era.

His accomplishments are many. He was the first black player to win the National League Most Valuable Player Award and was awarded both the Presidential Medal of Freedom and the Congressional Gold Medal.

In tribute, every April 15, the date the Brooklyn Dodgers started Robinson at first base, all uniformed personnel at 15 different ballparks wear Jackie's retired number 42.

Chadwick Boseman stars as Jackie Robinson in 42, the latest tribute to the famed baseball player. HANDOUT

This weekend a tribute of another kind comes to theatres.

The movie 42 details the Hall of Famer's history-making breaking of the colour barrier in professional baseball.

The film focuses on Robinson's (Chadwick Boseman) relationship with Branch

Rickey, played by Harrison Ford, the MLB executive who facilitated the player's signing to the ball team.

The story is custom-made for the movies. Spike Lee tried unsuccessfully to get a biopic of Robinson, starring Denzel Washington, off the ground in 1995, but others have had better luck.

Robinson portrayed himself in The Jackie Robinson Story. Filmed over the winter of 1949, during the off-season from the Brooklyn Dodgers, the film earned good reviews at the time, with the New York Times saying, "Mr. Robinson displays a calm assurance and composure that might be envied by many a Hollywood star."

Despite his acclaimed performance, he never made another film.

Since then he has been the subject of a variety of projects.

A 1978 ABC after-school special called A Home Run for Love used the player — portrayed by John Lafayette — as the heart of a tale about friendship and racial tolerance.

The First was a short-lived Broadway musical starring David Alan Grier as Robinson, and both Andre Braugher and Blair Underwood have played him in television dramas.

Back on the big screen Robinson was played by Keith David in Blue in the Face, an improvised love letter to Brooklyn featuring celebrity cameos by everyone from Harvey Keitel and Lily Tomlin to Madonna and Lou Reed. In a cameo we see Robinson from behind as he talks about breaking the colour barrier in baseball.

"I'm suing every blog saying I was kicked out of gymnastics," Bynes posted on Twitter. "What is wrong with you people? What would you do if you found fake stories about you?" Also, to make good on her earlier request that online outlets only use photos from her Twitter account and not unflattering paparazzi shots when reporting on her, Bynes posted a slew of photos from the last few years to Twitter, noting which ones are her favourites.

A-Team sues over trademark infringement

Liam Neeson and Bradley Cooper are suing a pair of companies for allegedly using photos of the A-Team co-stars in advertisements without their permission, according to court documents procured by E! News.

Neeson and Cooper claim Vutec Corporations and First Impressions Theme Theaters

The suit was filed in Los Angeles Superior Court. The actors are seeking damages and attorney fees.

I thought I was kind of past the point where this could be a reality for me. So it's been a big surprise and the most wonderful (one)." Sweat and sand

It's easy to see why Huntington Beach is known as Surf City USA. Wet suit-clad pedestrians — surfboards tucked under their arms — are as common a site as shopping bags and Starbucks coffee cups. A four-block radius located on the Pacific Coast Highway (PCH) and Main Street sets the scene for this city, but there are nearly 13 kilometres of sand to play in.

Start your day with breakfast at Michelle's Sugar Shack Café (hbsugarshack.com) on Main Street, before heading to the International Surfing Museum (surfingmuseum.org). It opens according to surf time. Translation? That's 11 a.m. or noon, unless wave conditions are too good to ignore. If it's closed you can still check out the names of those honoured along the Surfing Walk of Fame at Main and the PCH, including musician Dick Dale for adding to board culture.

Spend your afternoon playing beach volleyball or catching waves along the beach. Stroll along the historic Huntington Beach pier that juts into the Pacific. At its end is Ruby's Diner, a 1950s-inspired local restaurant chain. Before nightfall, stake out one of the fire pits located on the beach for an evening spent sitting on the sand and listening to the surf break on the shore (huntingtonbeachca.gov).

Shop and sip

Located south of Huntington along the PCH are Newport Beach and artsy Laguna Beach. While Fashion Island (shopfashionisland.com) is home to big brand stores, Laguna's downtown features a number of smaller shops, showcasing local artists and handcrafted goods, all set against a backdrop of green hills (lagunabeachinfo.com).

No afternoon is complete without sipping a cool cocktail at The Cliff (thecoffrestaurant.com). Offering a 180-degree view of the ocean, you can sit on the patio and watch sunning locals on the beach metres below, or scan the big blue for passing whales. You can also grab a cool authentic treat at Gelato Paradiso (gelatoparadiso.net) in Peppertree Lane and take a stroll in Heisler Park located high on the bluffs above the Pacific. The popular Las Brisas (lasbrisaslagunabeach.com), with its beckoning margaritas menu, offers a fusion of Californian and traditional Mexican cuisine, with fresh seafood offered each day. The building the restaurant is located in started life as the Victor Hugo Inn in the 1930s, before being converted in the late 1970s.

Sea and sanctuary

Located at the southern end of the O.C., Dana Point is a nature-lovers paradise. With a number of migration routes passing by, whale watching is on order. Dana Wharf (danawharf.com) has a fleet of 12 vessels that often encounter sea lions, blue and grey whales and even the occasional mega-pod of a few thousand dolphins swimming in unison and playing in the wake of the boats.

Exhausted after a day at sea? Pamper yourself at The Ritz Carlton, Laguna Niguel (ritzcarlton.com/lagunaniguel). The hotel is located 150-feet above Salt Creek Beach and offers stunning coastal views. You can take them in while sipping wine on the 180blu patio — a perfect sunset spot — or enjoying a well-deserved yummy meal at Raya, with its Latin-inspired menu of sustainable seafood, local produce and organic meat created by Chef Richard Sandoval. Spend an afternoon walking through the grounds of the hotel, and feeding the rabbits that hop around the property. Use the Ritz's beach butler service to be carted down in a buggy from the resort to the beach below. They will set up chairs and umbrellas, provide recreational equipment, and even build you a sandcastle to enjoy.

Cruising. A Mediterranean adventure has never been more affordable as firms slash prices to attract more visitors

life@metronews.ca

Experience all the glitz and glamour of the Mediterranean Riviera without paying celebrity-high prices by taking a cruise. You'll be able to marvel at the million dollar yachts in Saint Tropez, peer over the cliffs of the Amalfi coast, enjoy wine tasting in Tuscany and wander the poignant streets of Pompeii.

Cruise lines have dropped their Mediterranean prices to about $100 per day to attract more travellers this spring. When you consider that this covers your accommodation, meals and transportation to each fabulous port, it's great value. Here's a sample of what you'll see on land:

Saint Tropez along the French Riviera was once a sleepy fishing village that attracted the literary set from Paris in the 1950s. But when Bridget Bardot made it her favourite hideout in 1956, celebrities followed. Today, Hollywood stars ranging from Jack Nicholson to Jay-Z are regulars.

Despite their millions, you don't need a dime to enjoy walking along the waterfront and gawking at the mega-yachts and Maseratis. People-watch and window-shop at the quaint cafés, boutiques, galleries and antique shops. Stroll over to the Place des Lices and play petanque, a game similar to bocce, with the locals.

Take a bus ride along the Amalfi coast by a driver who knows how to navigate hairpin turns and avoid drop-off cliffs. With its spectacular vistas, this route is rated as one of the top 10 drives in the world and will leave you breathless at every bend.

Arrive in the cliff-top town of Sorrento, a popular resort

Mediterranean magic

Carnival is launching more Mediterranean cruises this year than ever before. Their newly renovated ship, the 2,600-passenger Sunshine, will offer 18 Mediterranean cruises from Barcelona and Venice starting this spring. Carnival has spent $155 million on its renovations and you can enjoy it for $100 a day. Visit carnival.com.

due to its charming atmosphere. Visit a local farmhouse nestled in the hills and if you don't pack a picnic from the ship, enjoy an inexpensive lunch of fresh cheese, juicy tomatoes and salami in a peaceful setting of lemon and olive trees.

Head to Pompeii by train or bus to explore its excavations, temples and museum. The many frescoes depict daily life — although the ones in the brothel should probably be X-rated. Admission to the site and museum is about $15.

Travel through the Tuscan countryside to Livorno and admire the medieval architecture. At a family vineyard enjoy a wine-tasting tour.

From the port of Genoa, travel to Manarolo, gateway to Cinque Terre, an UNESCO site of five fishing villages that have been untouched by modern times. Walk along the Street of Love, a picturesque path along the seaside where graffiti features romantic poetry.

Board a ferry to Vernazza, explore the tiny shops and enjoy a creamy gelato. Admire the colourful fishing boats and watch children playing on the beach.

A visit to the Mediterranean Riviera is not complete without a stop in Rome, even though it's a 90-minute bus ride from the port of Civitavecchia. The Colosseum is just one of the many magnificent monuments in the Eternal City where gladiators battled in front of 50,000 spectators.

End the day with a walk to the Trevi Fountain. Follow tradition and toss a coin into the water to ensure you will return to this unforgettable region. You only need a penny.

Metro's guide to travel guide books

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

Nothing beats a good guidebook. Despite the incredible amount of information available online, there is something comforting about not having to rely on the world of Internet connectivity and power outlets when you are travelling. Here are a few titles worth packing:

Originally written for backpackers and bohemians, Lonely Planet now offers suggested itineraries for more up-scale travellers with their Discover series books. Think boutique hotels and bed and breakfasts versus hostels. The If You Like tips suggest lesser known alternatives to major sites. In the Netherlands for example, if you like the Rijksmuseum, they suggest adding the Groninger Museum or Kroller-Muller Museum to your plans.

The Rough Guides are great for travellers wanting to reduce their carbon footprint. They make a point of offering green alternatives to everything from accommodations to local tour operators. The destination listings offer a good variety of bars, restaurants and attractions.

Where to Go When, by Eyewitness Travel Guides, is for people who are planning their holiday based on when they are able to travel versus having a specific destination in mind. Think teachers on March Break or newlyweds looking for the best honeymoon destination. There are more than 300 seasonal recommendations for destinations that are at their best during different months of the year.

Time Out books offer top 10 lists for culture vultures who want to get beyond the best known highlights. Using a list of recommendations to plan your days is an especially great way of giving a short trip some focus.

Tuna Niçoise grows up on the grill

ROSE REISMAN

rosereisman.com or follow her on twitter @rosereisman

There's nothing tastier than a Niçoise salad made with freshly seared tuna. The trick to properly searing tuna is to cook it on high heat for the time specified — and no more.

If you're not going to eat immediately, place it in the refrigerator to stop the cooking process, otherwise the tuna will be overcooked.

1. Boil the potatoes until tender, approximately 15 minutes. Drain, cool and dice. Place in a serving bowl. Add the steamed beans, cucumber, tomatoes, onion, olives and dill.

2. To make the dressing, stir the olive oil, lemon juice, anchovies, garlic, mustard, salt and pepper together until well mixed. Pour over the potato mixture. Place three-quarters of the potato mixture on a serving platter, leaving the remainder for garnish.

3. Heat a non-stick grill pan or barbecue to high and grill the tuna for approximately 1 1/2 minutes per side for seared, or until done to your preference, but do not overcook. Place the tuna, either whole or sliced, over the potato mixture and scatter the reserved mixture overtop or along the side.

Lunch. Shrimp and Watermelon Salad

1. Place shrimp in shallow dish. Pour 1/2 cup (125 ml) Thai chili sauce over shrimp, turning so that all are well coated. Cover and marinate at room temperature for 30 minutes. Reserving sauce from dish, thread shrimp onto 4 skewers.

3. Spray grill with Pam Grilling; heat to medium-high heat. Grill skewers, basting with reserved sauce during first 5 minutes only, until shrimp are opaque, approximately 10 minutes.

4. In serving bowl, toss watermelon, croutons, tomatoes, basil and feta. In separate bowl, whisk remaining Thai chili sauce, lemon juice, oil, pepper.

5. Remove shrimp from skew-ers. Arrange on top of salad. Drizzle with 3 tbsp of vinaigrette, tossing gently. Serve with remaining vinaigrette on the side. NEWS CANADA

Making change. How to impact the world while still keeping cash in your pocket

RUMEET BILLAN
TalentEgg.ca

You want to make an impact, but you also have school debt, rent and car insurance to pay for, among other expenses. Your parents want you to find a stable job, one that comes with vacation pay and benefits.

The job market is competitive and your priorities seem to be competing with one another as well. When applying for your next job, it doesn't have to be an either/or decision. The application process, when seeking employment, expects students and recent graduates to choose between the for-profit and not-for-profit sector. When applying for jobs, you have to consider your commitments, financial goals and also what your personal goals are.

three and find a career path that fits who you are as opposed to trying to fit into a pre-existing box that may come at the expense of what you want to achieve?

Traditionally, Canadians have ranked corporations as high in profit potential and low on the social impact scale. Although more organizations are incorporating social responsibility within their mandates, the bottom line is still profit.

Not-for-profit organizations rank high on their social impact and relatively low in profit potential, often dependent on grants, donors and volunteers. The line-up for a promotion at an established not-for-profit is long and also requires years of experience.

There are assumptions that students and new grads often make about both sectors, and — whether right or wrong — this influences where you consider applying and also the direction of your career path. Some find their way, and some are left feeling jaded and stuck.

In both sectors, how many people do you know who are not satisfied with what they are doing, but also suggest that they don't have the flexibility to move out of their current role? I can name a few.

If you can't find your place within the two sectors, what you can do is begin thinking beyond the traditional notions of for-profit and not-for-profit and consider the emergence of social enterprises.

The rise of a third sector, the social sector, merges the traditional concepts and has left social entrepreneurs with a desire to not only make a profit, but also incorporate a social mission within their business models. Incubators, conferences and showcases are popping up and may help to spark an idea, or introduce you to a new network of organizations that are working towards both profit and social impact.

Summer of the CV. Working as a camp counsellor a tremendous lesson for future teachers

LEAH RUEHLICKE

For those in the education stream, it's no secret that this is a tough job market to break into — it can take years to find full-time employment.

Gaining experience in your field early on is an excellent way to narrow down what you actually want to do and become more marketable to employers.

Student Heather Galloway decided to advance her career while simultaneously saving up rent money in her search for summer jobs. A teacher's college student at Nipissing University, Galloway got a summer job a few years ago as a camp counsellor at the YMCA. The following year she returned as an inclusion counsellor, working with kids who have developmental issues. Both of these positions taught her the importance of being able to think on your feet and adapt to changing situations — a vital lesson for every aspiring teacher! Working two summers in a camp setting helped her get another job last summer: site supervisor for the JK/SK before and after school program at an elementary school.

"I'm learning more about different age groups, because my teaching degree focused on Grades 4 to 10," Heather said.

"It's been great opening myself up to new experiences and grade levels."

She says she initially searched for camp jobs to beef up her résumé, but she "continued to work for them because it is just so much more fun than sitting in an office all summer."

Moose edge Olympiques to grab series stranglehold

Sweep, part two?

Halifax can close things out on Wednesday night

ANDREW RANKIN
In Gatineau

The Halifax Mooseheads withstood a far different opponent in Game 3.

Facing a rejuvenated Gatineau Olympiques squad that played like it had nothing to lose, the Mooseheads dug deep and came up with a 4-2 victory before 3,406 fans at the Robert Guertin Arena on Tuesday night.

"It was really like playoff-type hockey tonight," said Mooseheads defenceman MacKenzie Weegar.

"The guys really stepped up, especially (Fucale). He's played great for us again and again. But it's a game that we're going to be faced with a lot more as we go deeper in the playoffs. We faced adversity that game but we got through it."

With the win, the Mooseheads now take a commanding 3-0 lead in their second-round series.

Just when it seemed it would be another Herd route after Darcy Ashley tallied just 2:25 into the contest, Gatineau fought back.

The Olympiques found the equalizer when Emile Poirier scored one of his two goals just over four minutes later.

And after facing a two-goal deficit, Poirier struck again to make it a one-goal game 8:09 into the second frame.

"It was exciting," said Mooseheads forward Nathan

Again, the Mooseheads proved too much.

Mooseheads forward Stefan Fournier iced the victory with his second tally of the night on an empty-netter in the dying second of regulation.

Matthew Boudreau rounded out the scoring for the Herd.

Mooseheads netminder Zach Fucale faced 16 shots and gave up his first goals of the series, but again he came up big when he had to.

For Mooseheads forward Luca Ciampini the result was all that mattered.

Jays' core strength coming up short

MLB. Power hitters Bautista, Encarnacion yet to find rhythm as Toronto falls in Detroit

Even with the pricey additions to the Blue Jays roster in the off-season, success still comes down to the expected, much-needed production of incumbent power-hitters Jose Bautista and Edwin Encarnacion.

So far, it hasn't been happening. Bautista, back in the three-hole against the Tigers on Tuesday, returned to action in a 7-3 loss in Detroit.

He had missed the previous three games with an ankle injury. The Jays' primary run producer went 0-4, facing Anibal Sanchez and the Detroit bullpen.

"Bautista squared up some balls all night long," Jays manager John Gibbons said, including a deep warning-track fly ball to centre in the eighth. "Some good things happened, but they took it to us early."

Bautista is now batting .188 for the season, with two homers and four runs driven in.

"We're seven games in, still very early," Bautista said. "We haven't been playing up to our capabilities, everybody would agree with that. So our focus is

As for Encarnacion, he has played every day, batting fourth, but with Tuesday's 0-for-4, his average dropped to .074, with one homer and three runs-batted-in.

Woods wants an end to his green jacket drought

Around every corner at Augusta National is another reminder that Tiger Woods isn't getting any younger.

He was introduced at his news conference on Tuesday as playing the Masters for the 19th time, which caused Woods to bow his head and cover his eyes.

Among dozens of photographs on the walls of the club is one of defending champion Phil Mickelson helping Woods — with a much fuller head of hair — into the green jacket after Woods won the Masters in a playoff.

That was from 2005. And that was the last time Woods won the Masters.

Could he have imagined in 2005 that seven Masters would come and go without him winning?

"I wouldn't have been happy with that," Woods said. "I put myself in the mix every year but last year, and that's the misleading part. It's not like I've been out there with no chance of winning this championship."

"I've been there, and unfortunately just haven't got it done." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kessel nets winner at worlds as U.S. beats Canada

Team USA's Brianna Decker cheers on Amanda Kessel after her game-winning goal on Tuesday night at the women's world hockey championships in Ottawa. SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The United States reclaimed the women's world hockey championship on Tuesday with a 3-2 win over Canada.

The Americans have won four of the last five world women's titles.

Amanda Kessel — the sister of Toronto Maple Leafs forward Phil Kessel — roofed the winner on a 2-on-1 break at 3:09 of the third period. Canada pulled goaltender Shannon Szabados in the final seconds but couldn't get the equalizer with the extra attacker.

Burlington, Vt., last year and the U.S. turned the tables last night.

Brianna Decker and Megan Bozek also scored for the U.S., while goaltender Jessie Vetter needed to make only 14 saves for the win. Kendall Coyne added two assists.

Courtney Birchard and Caroline Ouellette replied for Canada in front of 13,776 at Scotiabank Place. Szabados was the busier goalie, stopping 27 of 30 shots in the loss.

Marie-Philip Poulin had two assists and led the tournament in scoring with six goals and six assists in five games. The 22-year-old from Beauceville, Que., was named the tournament's most valuable player and top forward.

Design

The new Impala is similar in size to the outgoing version, but embodies Chevrolet's latest design "language." There's more to admire inside with an impressive-looking gauge layout and control panel. The smaller fuel and temperature readouts are flanked by a clearly legible rev counter and speedometer.

Yes, GM is making some great-looking interiors these days.

Noise cancellation

The Impala features some serious cabin noise abatement, including active noise cancellation for four-cylinder Impalas. The system uses hidden microphones and a special control module to create opposing sound waves sent through the car's speakers that cancel out low-engine-speed droning.

Luxury experience

The mid-grade LT significantly ups content levels. The LTZ will provide a full-on luxury experience with leather seats, power sunroof, navigation and other goodies. Impala buyers will also be offered a plethora of electronic safety systems designed to keep the car and its occupants out of harm's way.

Review. If going smaller is all about saving gas, then maybe you don't have to go smaller

It has been years in the making, but General Motors finally pushed the reset button on one of its most endearing brands. But will car shoppers warm to the Impala, or is all the attention on smaller mid-sized cars?

When it debuted in 1958, the Impala became synonymous with affordable luxury that conferred a measure of success and social status upon its owners.

As the dinosaurs disappeared and the Ice Age receded, the Impala's role became less clearly defined, other than becoming the quintessential fleet-mobile. But the all-new Impala that's due to arrive this spring will have new purpose.

Chevrolet's enhanced flagship now shares the same platform with Cadillac's top-positioned XTS, but its appearance is far more broad-shouldered and defined than the Caddy. The grille makes a dramatic statement, with delicate horizontal bars extending across the upper and lower air intakes.

There's a stop/start system that kills the engine when the vehicle is stationary and then re-fires it when the brake is released. Regenerative braking creates electricity while slowing down, which helps recharge the batteries.

eAssist, which is offered in other GM sedans, should give the Impala a fuel-consumption rating of about 8.4 l/100 km in the city and 5.5 on the highway, compared to a 9.5/5.9 estimate for the base 2.5.

Honestly, for Chevrolet, keeping the Impala in stock could prove challenging. GM's sculptors have fashioned an enticingly spacious family sedan, while the technical types have succeeded in reigning in fuel consumption. It's a far cry from 1958, but the idea of a big, comfortable road car really gets back to Impala's roots, without the thirst for fuel.

The diving body line in front of the rear tires is questionable, but at least it's distinctive. Nice touches include the trapezoidal exhaust finishers, big wheels and chrome bits. Of course, this is the top-of-the-line LTZ trim.

With an automatic transmission, there's little need for a tachometer this large, but it sure looks great with the silver eyebrow.

Park right in the garage

Some people have problems consistently parking their car in the right spot in the garage, especially when they need to leave enough space to access various items. The Maxxa Laser Parking System takes care of your parking woes by ensuring that you consistently park your car in the same spot every time. When attached to your garage ceiling, the system's motion sensor emits a laser beam as you approach. When the beam shines on a pre-selected spot on the hood of your car, you're properly parked. The single-car garage system sells for about $20 US while the two-car garage model retails for $24. You'll find both at smarthome.com.

Pull out dents

A dent in your vehicle's door, fender or other body panel can look much worse than it actually is. Before heading to a body shop or calling one of those dent-repair outfits, why not try repairing it yourself with the 4-Head Suction Cup Dent Puller from Grip-on tools. As the name implies, this device features four suction cups that can literally pop out the dings and dents from your vehicle's sheet metal. The device also doubles as a glass holder when installing replacement auto glass or windowpanes around the home. But the best part is that the Suction Cup Dent puller retails for just $10, so it's not as though you're out a lot of dough if it doesn't do the job. Pick one up from northerntool.com.

Tread in time

You could easily drop 15 large for a fancy Rolex (that all your friends will probably think is a knock-off, anyway), or you could take that same portion of your inheritance and purchase a Tread 1 timepiece created by former specialty car builder Devon Motor Works (now called Devonworks) and be really different. The Tread 1 uses four miniature motors attached to a series of drive belts that control the hour, minute and second readouts. All of the action, which is visible through the watch's bulletproof glass casing, is controlled by a battery-powered microprocessor. See the Tread 1 in action on YouTube, then complete the online order form at devonworks.com.

Portable garage lift

Most of today's light-duty vehicle-lift systems are designed for installation on a relatively permanent basis and are not easily relocated. The Maxjax lift from Danmar Equipment can be put away and stored when not in use and can be set up in virtually any garage in about 15 minutes, claims the manufacturer. The unit's main lift posts feature rollers that make them easy to move around after they've been disconnected from their flush-mounted anchor bolts (embedded in your garage's concrete floor). Lift capacity is rated at 6,000 pounds. Plan on spending around $2,200 US for the basic unit and go to maxjaxusa.com for more info, including a list of dealers.

BMW reveals a new signature sound, but it's not for every automaker out there

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Through the years many sounds have been associated with, and emanated from, automobiles.

To cite a few: the howl of an engine in anger; the bark of an unrestricted exhaust; the screech of tires desperately trying to find grip; the cursing and horn blowing induced by having to share the road with moronic motorists; the gluck-gluck of a kid throwing up in her child seat.

One of the newer automotive sounds is the "sound trademark."

A lot of these signature sounds typically end a radio or TV spot, like those quick electronic notes that say "Intel." They're an audio equivalent of a visual logo, if you will. Well-known examples are the Macintosh start-up chime, the

BMW recently switched up its "double gong" audio logo to a new one characterized as a "dynamic melody." Pictured is BMW's X4 Concept. CONTRIBUTED 20th Century Fox "Fanfare" and the NBC chimes.

On the automotive scene, BMW has been the most active "audio logo" practitioner. Its "double gong" logo sound has been around for 14 years. But a couple of weeks ago, BMW revealed a new audio calling card destined to replace the double-gong.

I've listened to this new sound several times and find it hard to describe.

This is how a BMW press release describes it: "Reverse technology is used to play sound elements forward and backwards in a way that symbolizes flexible mobility. The melody is introduced by a rising, resonant sound and underscored by two distinctive bass tones that form the sound logo's melodic and rhythmic basis. The sounds build toward a shimmering, sophisticated finish. This combination of different elements represents the joy of progress, of dynamism, and Sheer Driving Pleasure."

The description begs two pertinent questions...

"Huh?"

And, "You can accomplish

all that (whatever that is) in less than two seconds of sound?"

Frankly, I prefer the old double-gong and/or Audi's audio logo, which is comprised of a couple of quick and amped up "heart beats."

A few years ago Mercedes-Benz tried a "choir boy" sound logo, then dropped it and never replaced it.

Harley-Davidson tried for years to trademark the sound of its V-twin engines, but eventually gave up after deciding it wasn't worth spending more money with no end in sight.

So it doesn't seem to be for everyone. I don't foresee a time when all automakers will have an audio logo, but you never know.

Apparently note sequences work well as audio logos because once they become familiar, you only have to hear a couple of the notes before your brain wants/needs to finish the sequence. Like McDonald's "Bah dah bah bah bah ... I'm loving it."

For that reason, if I were ever to design an audio logo for a super hot car, it would include a second or two of screeching tires and manic engine howling followed immediately by someone yelling "Holy! ..." Your brain would easily fill in an appropriate second word.

Platform sharing creates siblings under the skin

Driving Force. Engineers later “tune” suspensions to fit each model

drive@metronews.ca

The basis of any vehicle is its platform, but the concept has changed over the years. At one time, it meant the solid frame upon which the body was bolted.

While most trucks are still built this way, the majority of cars, crossovers and SUVs use a unitized construction design that incorporates the body and chassis, and “platform” is used to describe their undercarriage engineering and assembly.

“The platform is modular building blocks, the parts underneath the car that most people don’t typically see,” says Orth Hedrick, director of product planning for Kia Motors America. “The geometry is critical, and it’s designed around the distance between the wheels and all that attaches to the suspension of the car. These components are part of the platform.”

Within an automaker’s lineup, two or more vehicles may share the same platform.

This doesn’t mean they’re identical underneath, but that they share common components, such as with Kia’s Forte and upcoming redesigned Soul.

“The suspension could be common between the two, but because (one is) wider, the sheet metal that ‘stitches’ the parts together changes,” Hedrick says.

“Rather than completely redo an entirely new suspension, which is tens of millions of dollars, and it performs the same function on a car that’s relatively the same size, why not use it on the same vehicle?”

“It’s like Costco buying in bulk. If you can ‘commonalize’ parts that are underneath the

Other factors

- Common parts across several models can also include engines, transmissions, and interior switches and controls.

car, your costs go down, and you can spend the money in exterior and interior (design) and features,” Hedrick adds.

The cost isn’t just in the parts themselves, but in initially creating them, since many suspension components are stamped out in enormous, expensive dies, or welded together by robots. If a part can be used over several models, it reduces the cost of creating a die or adding more robots to the assembly line to make individual parts for each vehicle line.

Once the suspension is designed, engineers will also “tune” it to each model, creating the specific ride and handling characteristics that drivers will expect from it. A luxury car will have softer springs and rubber bushings to give it a smoother, more comfortable ride, while a sportier model will have stiffer ones to create its more muscular characteristics. The steering can also be adjusted to give a more direct, “quicker” feel to a sporty model, while a mainstream vehicle will be tuned to be comfortable in everyday driving.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

Identify your priorities and focus on them to the exclusion of everything else. You know what must be done and you know that now is the best time to do it. The new moon will help you make it look easy.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Your dreams can and will come true and you must believe that. The mind is a powerful tool and if there is even a glimmer of doubt, you will set up obstacles that need not be there.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Go to places that excite you. Talk with people whose ideas inspire you. Under the influence of today's new moon, you can and you must be as adventurous as possible.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Employers will go out of their way to make life easy for you over the next 24 hours — if they think that is what you need and desire. If you want help, just ask for it.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Let your mind roam wherever it wants to and don't be afraid to think, say and do things that some other people might not approve of. You're at your best when rocking the boat.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Sometimes it is better to tell a friend a painful truth than a comfortable lie and that is the situation you are in at the moment. Let them know how you see their situation. They need your clear-headed input.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You must make an effort to communicate with loved ones. Make sure they know exactly what you are thinking. Minor disputes can easily be resolved over the next 24 hours.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Whatever you are currently working on, you must not try to push ahead too fast. Take it a step at a time, even if your progress seems to be slow. You'll get there in the end.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Say what you mean today and don't worry that it might hurt someone's feelings. It's your feelings that count and if the price of happiness is admitting that you no longer get on with someone then so be it.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You know you are right about something but you can't find the evidence that will prove it. How frustrating. Maybe it's because you are looking too hard. Maybe you should back off a little, for now.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You may have high standards but not everyone has what it takes to live up to them. And why should they anyway if they don't share your measuring stick? It takes all sorts to make a world.

Pisces

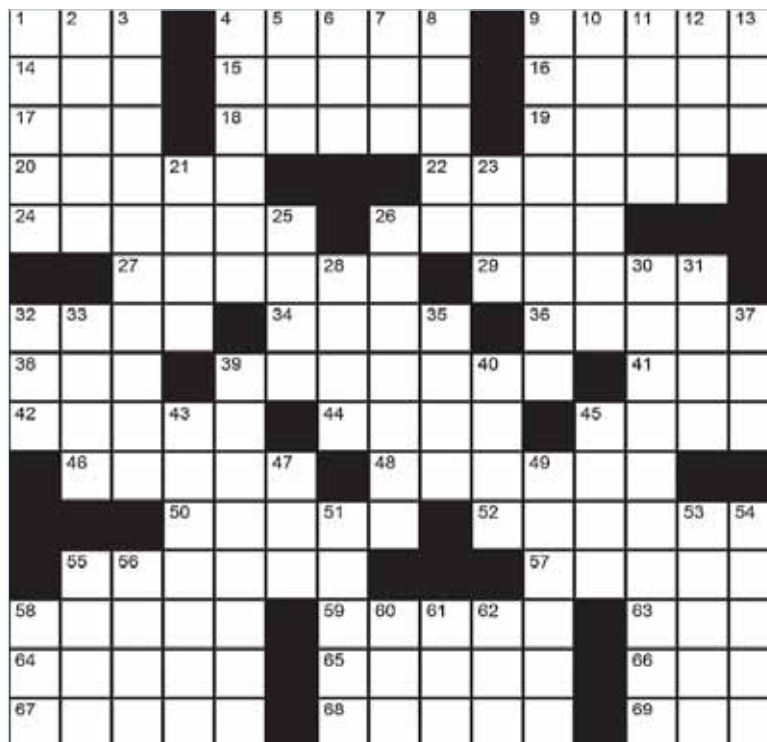

Feb. 20 - March 20

Your current task may seem too big for you but the planets indicate you have what it takes to push through. Today's new moon will boost your self-belief. SALLY BROMPTON
